NoblePeak Vision Wins Best of Show Honors at ISC West
Night Vision Technology Seen as a "Breakthrough"

Wakefield, MA – April 07, 2008 – NoblePeak Vision (www.noblepeak.com) received "Best of Show" honors in The Security Industry Association's New Product Showcase (NPS) held in Las Vegas at International Security Conference West (ISC West). NoblePeak was judged to have the most innovative new technology for the security industry.

NoblePeak distinguished their groundbreaking TriWave™ technology from among a record-high 104 entries to receive top honors in their category entry (Video Devices), then captured the "Best of NPS Innovation Award" from among the 16 category winners. This marks the second time in less than six months that NoblePeak has been recognized by the security industry, having won the Global Security Challenge in November 2007 and being named "the most promising security startup company."

"It is truly a breakthrough product," said Shayne Bates, principal of Security Consulting for Koffel Associates and 2008 NPS judge. "NoblePeak has applied novel science to solve the problem of how infrared light is used at night. This product has the potential to change how we see and use cameras in a range of facilities and conditions."

"This is a great honor for us," said Mike Decelle, NoblePeak's president and CEO. "We believe there is significant but untapped demand for high performance night vision at a commercially viable price. It is gratifying to see validation from the security industry of this growing market opportunity and of NoblePeak's unique technology solution."
